DIPLOMATIC POST FOR ROUGH RIDER

Craig Wadsworth, Friend of Roosevelt, Once in Service, Is Given Secretaryship.

OTHER FOREIGN BERTHS

In making the annual fiscal year list of appointments in the foreign field yesterday, President Taft returned to the diplomatic service Craig Wadsworth, a former Rough Rider and close personal friend of President Roosevelt. Mr. Wadsworth, who is a well-known New York society man and a member of the James W. Wadsworth family, was sent to the embassy at London as secretary by President Roosevelt, but he was allowed to leave the service shortly after the cabinet left the White House. In view of the fact that there was no effort on the part of the State Department or President Taft to retain Mr. Wadsworth in the diplomatic service three years ago, his reappointment at this time came as a surprise to the service.

Mr. Wadsworth is compelled to begin at the bottom again. He came to Washington last May after obtaining the position of an appointment to a secretaryship and took a competitive examination. He passed fairly well in the list, and in the appointments made yesterday he is assigned as secretary of legation at Toberan, Peru. Mr. Wadsworth preferred to be returned to London or some other important embassy. He was appointed third secretary at London in 1902, when he was removed to second secretary. He left the service in August, 1909. Mr. Wadsworth was the embassy secretary who was drugged into the Thaw case in 1908. The office pays $5,000.

Hoffmann Philip Changed.

In the list of nominations, which were sent to the Senate by the President late yesterday afternoon, were forty-three names. Thirteen of these are secretaries of embassies or legations, six being new appointments, and thirty are in the consular service. The most important diplomatic appointment was that of Hoffmann Philip, of the district of Columbia, who is made secretary of embassy at Constantinople. Mr. Philip had occupied this office since June, 1910, until last February, when he was brought to Washington to be chief of the Division of Near Eastern Affairs. Since Congress has evinced a determination to curtail emergency appointments at the State Department, under which this office existed, it became necessary to return Mr. Philip to his post. Each office pays $5,000.

Another appointment is due to Congressional legislation. Congress decided that the Bureau of Foreign Trade Relations in the State Department was necessary. As John Ball Osborne, of Scranton, Pa., who for several years has been chief of that bureau, is appointed consul at Havre, Mr. Osborne's present office pays $5,000, and the Havre post pays $3,000.

James E. Dunning, of Portland, Me., was nominated consul general at large for the Eastern Asia district, at $5,000. He is a Harvard graduate. Mr. Dunning fills a vacancy created by the promotion of Fleming D. Cheahire, of Brooklyn, from consul general at large to consul general at Canton, at $5,000. He is a Harvard graduate. LONGED FOR CITY.

Harpers Ferry Man Inspired by Mail.

Clarence O. Wadsworth lived on the mountain peaks at Bolivar Heights near Harpers Ferry, Md. Richard Sylvester is his neighbor there during the week-ends through the summer. Clarence O. Wadsworth watched often for the figure of his neighbor, the superintendent of Metropolitan police, returning to his home at Harpers Ferry. Now, when the major returns at the week-end, Wadsworth became dissatisfied with the bracing air, and innocent charm of his mountain fastness, and longed for the fascinations of the city. He felt he called to him to join the police force; that he, like his illustrious neighbor, might one day become head of a great police department. He was during the summer in his mountain home, and had ample folk for neighbors. At last the determination seized Wadsworth to follow his neighbor to the city and discuss with him the project of becoming a trusted member of the force. He bid farewell to each well-known hill and valley, and boarded the train at Harpers Ferry. Here ends all trace of Wadsworth, and the project of becoming a trusted member of the force. WOMAN DIES IN CHAIR.

Colored Girl Pays Penalty for Murder in Virginia.

Richmond, Va., Aug. 16.—While protests were still pouring in upon Gov. Mann against the execution of a woman, Virginia Christian, a seventeen-year-old colored girl, was electrocuted in the penitentiary here today for murder. The girl sat in the same chair in which the life of young Henry Clay Beattie, the wife murderer, was snuffed out last November.

Virginia Christian was guilty of the murder of Mrs. Ida Virginia Belote, a frail white woman, aged seventy-two, whose atrocious circumstances in the Belote home in Hampton, Va., March 18, last.

The girl was declared dead at 7:23 o'clock. She was the first of her sex to be electrocuted in this State.

ADOPTS SUBSTITUTE FOR BOURNE BILL

House Passes Parcel Post Measure and Conference Committee Is Expected to Accept It.

By a vote of 142 to 96, the House yesterday adopted as a substitute for the Bourne parcel post bill the bill introduced by Representative Lewis of Maryland. The House then sent the bill to conference, with instructions to its managers that they should make a fight for the Lewis bill. The indications are that the Lewis bill will be made the subject of a compromise by the conference.

The Bourne amendment provides for the establishment of a zone system, charges to be paid for the transmission of packages according to the distance traveled. It applied only to fourth class matter and excluded from the operation of the proposed parcel post law agricultural products, books, and some other commodities.

The Lewis bill directs the Postmaster General to establish an experimental parcel post, with a limit of fifteen pounds, the post to carry any material that may now be shipped by express. The rates of postage are fixed as cents for the first pound and 1 cent for each additional pound within the county of shipment, or a contiguous county. For distances of 25 miles the rates are 4 cents for the first pound and 2 cents for each additional pound, and for each additional 10 miles, 1 cent a pound additional. A board of experts is created to administer the law.

The Lewis bill also authorizes the creation of a commission which is charged with the duty of making an investigation and report on a bill providing for the establishment of a more extended system of parcel post and postal express. As the Lewis bill is largely experimental, House leaders believe it will be agreed to in conference. The bill is a compromise between the Bourne amendment and the Lewis bill.

CONFESSES TO MURDER.

Chicago Man Tells of Slaying His Stepdaughter.

Los Angeles, Aug. 16.—Charles Eugene Greenfield, of Chicago, according to the police, has confessed that he killed his stepdaughter Vivian, who was found with her throat cut at Venice, a suburb. Greenfield was captured in Cucamonga, Pa., in the mountains in San Bernardino County. He admitted that he and the little girl had planned to die together. They were going to drown themselves at the beach, he said, but there was a big crowd. They went to a room and he put her throat with a razor. Seeing the blood, he said, he lost his nerve and could not kill himself. Greenfield was lodged in jail at San Bernardino, and will be brought here today.

FIREMEN NEAR DEATH.

New York Department Members
May Die from Injuries.

New York, Aug. 16.—Three firemen were overcome by smoke, two of them so seriously that they will probably die, and a loss of $200,000 caused by a fire early today which gutted a seven-story building at 27-35 Riverside Street. The flames threatened the destruction of the Florence Crittenton Mission, at 23 Bleeker Street, a charitable institution where twenty-five women and nine babies were housed. The fire was carried to the street by the police rescues from the Mercer Street station. Firemen Finnegan and Hynes, of Engine Company No. 2, were taken to St. Vincent's Hospital after being overcome by smoke on the ground floor. Capt. Bigget, of the same company, was also overcome. He was able to continue work after being revived. The rescue of the three men was heroically effected by Firemen Stone and King, of Engine Company No. 2, who risked their lives in groping through the dense smoke and falling debris to rescue the prostrate forms of their fellow-employees.

It is thought that Wilson and Marshall have fighting close in Rhode Island, Minnesota and Colorado.

ARGUMENTS END IN DAWD CASE

Prosecutor Fredericks Makes the Closing Address, Reviewing Volumes of Evidence.

JUDGE TO DELIVER HIS CHARGE THIS MORNING

Jury Expected to Get Case by Noon.

Accused Faces Ten-year Prison Term.

Los Angeles, Aug. 16.—The case of Clarence S. Darrow, charged with the bribery of McNamara jurors, did not go to the jury to-night as was expected. When Assistant Attorney Fredericks concluded the final argument for the State at 4:45 o'clock, Justice Johnston decided that the hour was too late for him to begin his charge to the jury, which he stated would be quite lengthy, and adjourned for the day.

At 8 o'clock to-morrow morning the court will commence reading his instructions, and probably by 10 o'clock the jury room above the court room, to liberate on the guilt or innocence of the noted lawyer, humanitarian and philosopher. On the result of their deliberations depends whether Darrow will be convicted and his name cleared, or whether he will face a term of from one to ten years in San Quentin penitentiary.

Lands Detective's Honesty.

District Attorney Fredericks occupied the whole of the day with his closing argument. He took the jury through the volumes of evidence which he had prepared in preparation for the testimony first of the witnesses for the State and then took up those of the defense. Piece by piece he picked to pieces all the Darrow defense. He lauded Franklin's honesty and that of Harrington, as witnesses, and paid a glowing tribute to Detective Guy Biddell. He said that Bidwell was a man of integrity, a man who had been associated in the rounding up of the McNamara case, and who subsequently received bribes from Darrow to betray the interests of the State. Fredericks charged that Bidwell was the most honest of public servants, and that he would have kept Darrow's money, and the world would not have been the wiser.

"I don't believe all the witnesses for the defense told the whole truth," said Fredericks. "The testimony of the defendant helps himself little before the jury. A guilty man with years of legal experience can say 'I am not guilty' in a way that is convincing."

Effect of Acquittal.

"I am not going to suppose that there are twelve men so unreasonable as to believe that Darrow knew nothing of the bribery, and that it was a stranger who gave Franklin the money," said the District Attorney as he heard the end of his argument. "If you acquit this man, you will be making it possible for jury bribers to work hereafter without hindrance."

"Suppose Franklin told you that a stranger gave him the money," continued Fredericks. "Franklin is a stranger, and then, too, strangers are not giving strangers money to bribe jurors. It's absurd. The jury must believe that."

Guilt of Twenty-two Crimes.

He declared there had been no argument between the McNamara defense and the District Attorney, whereby the McNamara defense pleaded guilty before the arrest of Franklin. He said that he had been approached before that time with a proposition for ending this case, but that before Franklin's arrest he would not have been so easily won over. He said that he had held out for a plea of guilty for both, he said, and it was not until after the Franklin arrest that he made it possible for jury bribers to work hereafter without hindrance.

In closing his argument, Fredericks declared that in attempting to prevent the administration of justice in the McNamara trial, Darrow had been guilty of twenty-two crimes, and that he expected the jury to vote according to the evidence.

Springfield, Ill., Aug. 16.—Members of the Third Battalion of the Twenty-third United States Infantry, stationed at Camp Lincoln, were today ordered to return immediately to Fort Benjamin Harrison, Ind., under the command of the order of the War Department. It is generally expected here that the men will be ordered South as soon as they have reached their home station.
